EPISODE 101: MICHIGAN COMMERCE

Read the the story below and circle specific sensory images that connect to the five senses of the reader.

I love the feel of cool dirt on my hands as I plant garlic cloves. The sharp scent of garlic mixes with the fresh smell of soil, and I know it's ready to grow. Garlic thrives in loose, rich soil, and when the conditions are just right, I can almost feel the earth come alive.

By summer, I harvest the firm bulbs, their strong smell filling the air. Afterward, I chop it up and toss it into a hot pan, the bold flavor bringing every dish to life. To me, garlic is the taste of hard work and the magic of the earth.
